

IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR HUGH D. CAMPBELL, JR.

One of Flagstaff's best loved and most widely known young men passed away last Saturday night, May 31, in the Angeles Hospital, Los Angeles, when Hugh D. Campbell, Jr., succumbed to the indirect effects of an accident suffered last December. With him at the time of his death were his father and mother, sister and one brother. Bronchial pneumonia was the direct cause of his death; but his weakened condition made him an easy victim to the disease.

The accident mentioned occurred in Norfolk, Va., five months ago. Campbell, with other sailors, was standing in mess line, when some one utterly ignorant of how to handle it jumped into a big navy truck standing nearby and started it. The heavy machine got out of his control and coming at the line of waiting men from the rear, struck them broadside, killing one outright and injuring eighteen others. Campbell was hit in the small of the back and whirled to one side. A hip was broken and other injuries sustained that kept him on his back from that time until his death.

He had been showing considerable improvement, and it had been thought he would soon be strong enough to stand an operation that would enable him to get on his feet again, when he was attacked by the disease that caused his death.

The body, accompanied by the members of the family with him in Los Angeles, was brought to Flagstaff, reaching here Monday night. Several hundred people were at the station, numbering his old friends by the score. A company of his old boyhood comrades, who like himself, offered their services to the country in its time of need, were there in uniform, drawn up at attention to do him honor. A squad of sailors bore the casket, as followed by the marching soldiers. It was taken to the Flagstaff Undertaking Parlor, later to be carried by the same hands to the home of his parents in the west end of town.

Funeral services were held Wednesday morning. Possibly the greatest number of friends ever gathered together on any similar occasion in Flagstaff, were at the services, which were unusually impressive. Arrangements were in charge of the Flagstaff Undertaking Parlor.

Forty-five soldiers and sailors in uniform met at the office of the Western Union Telegraph Co., and under the command of Captain E. M. Robinson, marched to the home, reaching there at 9 o'clock, and acted as an escort of honor for their dead comrade. At 9:30 services were held in the Church of the Nativity, High Reguier Mass being celebrated by Rev. Father H. Hahn. The funeral services and sermon were conducted and preached by Father C. Fabre.

From the church the cortege went to the cemetery south of town, where Father Fabre led a short service, a squad each of sailors and soldiers having acted as pall bearers. A profusion of flowers of unusual beauty and quantity, testified to the esteem in which the young man had been held by his friends.

After the casket had been placed in its resting place a firing squad of soldiers fired three volleys over the grave. Dry eyes were few in the crowd and several left the scene, unable to control themselves. Following the volleys from the soldiers' rifles there was just a moment of intense silence—no one moved, or spoke, but stood motionless, gripped with the sadness and solemnity of the occasion. For just a moment, then from the crest of the hill a hundred yards away stole the low, sweet notes of "Taps," from the instrument in the hands of Company I's old bugler, Ferrol Travis. The saddest and sweetest of all bugle calls must have been played by sympathetic lips for the crowd stood and listened, every one unconscious of every one else, until the last echo of the last note died away on the Arizona air.

Hugh D. Campbell, Jr., was born in Winslow, Ariz., July 22, 1892. His family lived there until he was 12 years of age when they moved to Flagstaff, where young Hugh entered St. Anthony's school and spent the next two years. From here he entered St. Vincent's school in Los Angeles, from which institution he graduated in two or three years. There followed a term of instruction in the University of Arizona in Tucson, after which he spent about five years assisting his father in looking after his extensive sheep interests, with headquarters at Ash Fork.

When the war broke out the tremendous business had practically been turned over to the son. He enlisted in the navy in July, 1918, being sent to San Diego, and later was transferred to Norfolk, Va., where he met with the fatal accident.

He is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Colin Campbell; a sister, Miss Claire Campbell; one brother, Frank, with him at the time of his death; and a second brother, Eugene, now with the A. E. F. over in France. He was a nephew of Senator Hugh Campbell. Besides these near relatives a large number of more distant ones reside in Flagstaff.

When Hugh Campbell, Jr. died, all northern Arizona lost a young man who gave every promise of adding to the lustre of our section. He had shown remarkable business judgment for one so young. His friends were legion and his enemies few, for he possessed so many lovable and admirable qualities that his friendship was valued and his opinion respected. After he suffered the accident in December he was never again on his feet for the next five months, and suffered untold agony, but the greatness of his character and the sweetness of his spirit kept back all complaint and made him endure his lot with a smile on his face and a constant thought in his mind for the comfort of those around him.

MRS. J. E. KING DIES IN PHILADELPHIA HOSPITAL

Sad news has come to Flagstaff of the death in the Presbyterian Hospital, Philadelphia, Penn., on May 29th last, of Mrs. J. E. King, mother of Mrs. C. F. Portz, of Flagstaff. Mrs. King had many warm friends here, having lived here from 1907 to 1915, going back in that year to live with her other daughter in Philadelphia.

Mrs. J. E. King was born in Brunswick, Maryland, on May 10, 1843. Her maiden name was Mary Elizabeth Frazier, one of the daughters of an illustrious Southern family. Early in life she united with the Episcopal church and during her lifetime was consistent in the deep interest she took in the welfare of that institution.

In 1867 she married Josiah Edward King, to which union eight children were born, two surviving—Mrs. Portz of Flagstaff and Mrs. E. W. Barnes of Philadelphia. Before coming to Flagstaff she resided in White Haven, Penn., in which town interment took place.

Mrs. King had been ill for five months preceding her death, but the immediate cause of death was an accident she suffered on the 28th day of May, living 18 hours afterward.

Both friends of Mrs. King and Mrs. Portz join in offering their sympathy to the bereaved daughter; knowing Mrs. King, they knew the loss sustained by the loved ones.

WILL DRAW 115 NAMES FOR THE SUPERIOR COURT

Judge J. E. Jones, of the Superior Court, yesterday issued the order for the drawing of 115 names for the trial jury. The drawing will be done next Monday and court will convene Monday morning, June 23.

This term of court will be unusual in the number of cases heard and the gravity of the charges. Three murder cases, one assault, and a host of lesser crimes are on the calendar.

It is not known yet whether the cases of Messrs. Kieth and Grant, the Doney Park settlers, charged with assault with deadly weapons, will be heard at this term, for Justice Robert J. Kidd has not rendered his decision on their preliminary hearings.

Mrs. Frank Harrison has been ill enough this week to require the attendance of a physician, but is now much improved and able to be out.

Flagstaff Team Plays Holbrook Next Sunday

The Flagstaff "Top o' the World" ball team goes to Holbrook Sunday for a game with that team. Holbrook is reported to have a fast nine and the boys will have to fight for another victory.

Williams comes here for a game the morning of the Fourth of July, one of the attractions of the big Elks' convention. There will be only one game during the celebration. Kingman, Catman, and Needles all have asked for games with the boys but have not been given dates yet. On the 22nd the team goes to Winslow, so the next home game, unless one is provided for the 15th, will be on the glorious Fourth of July.

LIEUT. JOHN MATTHEWS EXPECTED HOME AT ONCE

Lieut. John Matthews, grandson of Judge Gilliland, is expected home after three years and one month's service in the army, possibly a longer term of actual service than that of any other Flagstaff boy.

Lieut. Matthews went to the border with Company I, under Capt. Robinson, on the 9th day of May, 1919, and has seen continuous service since.

While in France, Lieut. Matthews received a wound in the leg that kept him in the hospital three months. He served as senior lieutenant in four different regiments while abroad.

Matthews planned to come through Concordia, Kans., where his wife has been waiting his return, the two to come home together. They will occupy Judge Gilliland's residence across the tracks. When Matthews entered the service he was connected with the Western Union office here, but it is not known just what his plans for the future are.

INJURED BY A FALLING TREE

Gene Lee was struck by a falling tree Mounds Park on Wednesday, and at first was thought to have been dangerously injured. Dr. H. K. Wilson was called to attend him and later reports are that his accident is not liable to prove fatal.

Lee just recently returned from the army and is the son of John Lee, a well known cattleman. Young Lee was assisting his father with a gang in constructing a stock tank; a tree was being cut out of way, and as it started to fall Lee walked under it and was crushed to the ground with the tree across his shoulders.

He was taken to the headquarters ranch at Clay Park and was reported as doing well when last heard from.

County Attorney F. M. Gold filed the complaint against Simplicity Tores, murderer of Victor Melick, on Wednesday. The preliminary hearing will be before Justice Kidd in Flagstaff, instead of being held in Williams, the scene of the crime.

ODD FELLOWS AND REBEKAHS WILL HOLD MEMORIAL SERVICE

The local lodges of Odd Fellows and Rebekahs will hold their annual Memorial service Sunday afternoon, day after tomorrow, at 3:00 o'clock in the Odd Fellows' hall. After the service the lodges will go in a body to the city cemetery and place flowers on the graves of departed lodge members.

MRS. L. R. LANEY PASSEN ON

After being in Flagstaff only one month, Mrs. L. R. Laney, mother of Miss Lena Laney, of the Flagstaff Lumber Co., died at their home on North Leroux street, last Sunday, June 1.

Mrs. Laney, with her daughter, Mrs. O. F. Thompson, came to Flagstaff the 2nd of May, to make their permanent home with Miss Laney, leaving their home of many years in Adel, Ga., in order that the family might be together.

Mrs. Laney was born in Crawford county, Ga., on June 4th, 1852, and spent the major part of her life in that state. The relatives who survive her are two daughters—Miss Lena Laney and Mrs. O. F. Thompson—and two small grandchildren. Their many friends in Flagstaff sorrow with them and extend them the sincerest sympathy in the loss of the one dearest to them all.

Funeral services were held in the parlors of the Flagstaff Undertaking Parlor, Tuesday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Luther Moore, of the Episcopal church. Interment was in the city cemetery.

The Flagstaff band, under Mr. Bergeron, is making rapid progress toward getting into shape. Every Monday and Thursday they meet in Marlar hall and spend several hours in practice. About fifteen musicians are on hand and quite a lot of real talent has been shown. The boys are very much pleased with Mr. Bergeron as leader. No date for their first public appearance has been set, but it will be in a few days.

Word comes from Dr. O. S. Baum, pastor of the Federated church, that he is improving nicely and expects to get home about the first Sunday in July. Dr. Baum suffered a breakdown some weeks ago and since then has been in Los Angeles recuperating.

MARSHAL V. H. MELICK OF WILLIAMS, KILLED BY MEXICAN; MURDERER WOUNDED AND IS IN COUNTY JAIL HERE

LIEUT. DUFFIELD RETURNS FROM SERVICE IN FRANCE

Lieut. E. H. Duffield, well-known railroad man all along the line of the Santa Fe, returned from overseas duty last week, reaching his home at Williams on the 29th.

Mr. Duffield used to be conductor on the Flagstaff short run, from which position he was promoted to trainmaster with headquarters at Winslow.

He volunteered on June 10th, 1918; was commissioned on August 19, of the same year, and ordered overseas on the 24th of August. He left Williams three days later, proceeding directly to Hoboken, where assignment to the 21st Engineers awaited him. Leaving New York on September 3, he landed in Manchester, England, on the 19th, from where he proceeded by train to Southampton. From there to Le Havre, France, where he reported to his commanding officer on September 26 at Sorey, which is near Toul, and in the advance area. He was engaged in operating a narrow-gauge railroad in that sector until October 9, when his unit, Co. D, was transferred to the Argonne sector, and placed on similar work through such important points as Montfaucon, Ciegas and Romagne.

On October 25th he was transferred to Co. H, 21st Engineers, and moved to the east of Verdun, where the Wild Cat Division was advancing on Metz. When the armistice became effective, he was transferred to standard-gauge repair work. It was over this railroad after being repaired, that the first U. S. A. train passed on its way to Germany. Lieut. Duffield was railway operating office in charge.

On December 1 he was located at Briey in charge of railway operations to Andun and on December 9 was again transferred, this time to Nantes on the west coast, and placed in full charge of terminal operations.

On the 8th of April he sailed from Brest on the steamship Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, the first of the German ships to engage in U. S. transport service.

Mr. Duffield is a strong booster of the A. E. F., having received good treatment, especially while in Base Hospital No. 34, at Nantes, recovering from influenza.

POST-OFFICE INSPECTOR COOPER IS EXPECTED

Either J. L. Cooper or Chas. Dutton, Arizona post-office inspectors, or both, are expected in Flagstaff any day, on a visit to determine our fitness for receiving the free delivery system of mail. When Mr. Cooper was here a short while ago he said that one or both of the gentlemen would try and be here before the end of the first week in June. Cooper is at present in the Holbrook country and Dutton is at work in the Gallup district.

IN POLICE COURT

Three young men—carpenters from California, who have been in town for some days on various jobs, were up in Judge Gilliland's court Monday morning on the charge of using indecent language before ladies and singing vulgar songs, the latter occurring in the city park. The offenses and their arrest took place Sunday afternoon and they spent the night in the city jail.

Monday morning they were told by Judge Gilliland that law and order were present in Arizona as well as in California and that the laws of Flagstaff were made to be observed. They pleaded guilty to the charge and got off with a fine of $10.00 each, which they paid.

W. H. Pearce, government custodian of the Cliff Dwellings, has had an unusually large number of visitors this year. During the month of May 705 persons registered in his record. Out of this number only three cars were from Flagstaff. In the first three days of June 100 people called on him. The road to the Cliff Dwellings is very good except for 2 1/2 miles, which is rocky, and a stretch of a half mile, just this side of the dwellings, which is very bad.

Billy Liesen, a young man making Flagstaff his headquarters for some time, left this week for Honolulu to make his home there. Liesen was born in Germany but at an early age, displeased with certain phases of life there, ran away and made his way to America.

Garland Tillman and Ray Curtis, of the White Garage, made a flying trip to Oak Creek last Sunday, called there by an automobilist who had broken the frame of his car. They made the round trip, fixed the car, and enjoyed a splendid trout supper in only a few hours.

Victor H. Melick, town marshal of Williams, was shot in cold blood and almost instantly killed at 6:15 o'clock last Saturday evening, after he had placed Tores under arrest for the theft of a horse.

The murder was one of the most un-called for in the criminal history of northern Arizona. The assassin did not give his victim a fighting chance for his life and was in no danger himself when he fired on the unsuspecting officer.

Tores is now in the county jail, where he was carried after being saved from swift death at the hands of friends of the murdered man by officers of Flagstaff. He is suffering from a severe wound but will likely recover.

The work of the officers is in every respect to be commended. Not over four hours elapsed from the time Melick was murdered until Tores was in a cell in the jail here. During those four hours some fast and furious action took place.

The difficulty started over Tores's possession of a horse, the property of Mrs. Ambrosia Means, wife of a hunter, trapper and guide famous all over the West, having piloted hunting parties of America's most prominent citizens, including Theodore Roosevelt and others. Tores tells a story of not knowing the animal belonged to Mrs. Means; but the fact remains that he had his saddle on the little black horse—one that Mrs. Means rode herself, and watering him at a trough a half block from her house. Mrs. Means saw him and noticed that some one, presumably Tores, had tried to in some measure disguise the animal, having bobbed its mane and tail.

Mrs. Means came out and accosted Tores, saying, "What are you doing with my horse? Take that saddle off. Who bobbed its mane and tail?"

Tores replied that he would take the saddle home, the presumption being that he would ride the horse there, remove the saddle and then bring the horse back. But Mrs. Means insisted on her way, saying, "No, you leave that horse right here."

And, after some further discussion, Tores went to home.

The authorities were notified and Ed Hamilton, Tom White and J. H. Paddock went after him. Coming to his mother's house, they inquired for him, but the mother, coming to the door, said he was not there. The officers left, but in just a few moments came back, and on their inquiry for him he came to the door with just his underclothes on; being engaged in taking a bath when called.

"Come on out and let's settle this thing up," he was hailed.

"All right; but wait until I get my clothes on," Tores replied, and went back into the house. Just a moment or two elapsed and Paddock saw him go from the back of the house into a little shack which he occupied himself and then Hamilton went into the shack and persuaded Tores to accompany him. Later it was discovered that he put into his clothes a .32-caliber automatic gun, with which he later murdered Melick.

When he came out of the house, Hamilton took him by the arm and said:

"Come on; we'll go over to Means and straighten this thing up."

Tores replied that he did not want to go and a few words were followed by a slight scuffle between the two men, in which Hamilton got a good hold on Tores's wrist and thought he could manage him in that way. But Tores jerked his gun, pointed it at Hamilton's middle, and, referring to the gun Hamilton was carrying, said: "Drop 'er, Ed, right where you are, or I'll kill you."

Tores then walked over and picked up the gun from the ground and ejected the shells. What he did with it then is not known.

Hamilton and Tores then started for town and met Paddock, who had left

POLLOCK WILL FORM BIG WHOLESALE HOUSE SOON AT PHOENIX

Business transactions have just been completed which mean much to Phoenix and Arizona and by which this city is made a large distributing center.

Articles of incorporation have been filed by the Hall-Pollock Co., wholesale grocers, that large concern having made arrangements for the purchase of the Phoenix branch of the Stetson-Barrett Co. The new concern will continue the business at the same location, the warehouses and wholesale rooms of the Stetson-Barrett Co. having been taken over by the new concern.

T. E. Pollock, of the Hall-Pollock Co., capitalist, banker, and stockman of northern Arizona, will be president. Mr. Pollock is well known throughout the entire West and enjoys an enviable reputation for his square business dealings, and the fact that he is at the head of this concern augurs well for its future popularity and success, and there is little doubt that the Hall-Pollock Co. will eventually become the largest concern of its kind in the Southwest.

H. C. Hall, who for the past eight years has been the manager of the Phoenix branch house of Stetson-Barrett Co., wholesale grocers of Los Angeles, is vice president and manager and will be the active head of the new company. Mr. Hall has spent the greater part of his business life in the wholesale grocery line and occupies a high place in the esteem of the wholesale and retail merchants of Phoenix and vicinity. The many friends that he made while connected with Stetson-Barrett Co. will welcome his entry into the new company.

The fact that W. H. Thomson, vice president of the Phoenix National Bank, is a stockholder and secretary of the Hall-Pollock Co., and that H. J. McCune, president of the Phoenix National Bank, is treasurer, is further proof that the personnel of the Hall-Pollock Co. is of the highest order and is further assurance that the name of Hall-Pollock Co., will signify honest and up-to-date business.—The Phoenix Republican.

Town Councilman R. E. Taylor has resigned from the council. His action was made necessary by increased personal affairs, and the fact that he had recently moved to his ranch just outside the city, making it inconvenient to always be on hand and efficiently look after the city business. The council swore in his place Woeber Smith, of the First National Bank, who is already sitting in the council meetings.

M. J. Powers, of the Citizens Bank, is in California representing the Arizona Bankers' Association at the convention of California bankers, held at Catalina Islands, June 5, 6, and 7. Mr. Powers is expected back about the 10th or 11th.

Next Sunday is Children's Day, and the morning service at the Federated Church will be turned over to the children, the program given by them and in their interest. The public is cordially invited to the service.

Jack Fuss has finished his work at the Fort Valley experiment station, and is now in Flagstaff, working on the boys' dormitory at the Normal school.

Supervisors met in regular session last Monday, transacted an amount of routine business and since then have been sitting as an equalization board, passing on the county tax roll as compiled by County Tax Assessor Dunn and his able assistants. They have not quite finished the latter work.

The board approved two new appointments: Howard Curtis of Williams as deputy sheriff, and William Beeson as Fair Commissioner for Coconino county.

The board signed the agreement of the county attorneys of Coconino, Pima and Maricopa counties for the compensation of C. B. Wilson for services in the matter of the validated bonds, and signed the agreement for this county.

The clerk of the board was asked to lay before Senator Ashurst and Representative Hayden the matter of expenses incurred by the county during the influenza epidemic in aiding the Western Navajo agency. It seems that the county has been unable to obtain refund from the Department of the Interior for this expense.

The report of the county treasurer showed receipts of $122,940.18 for the month of May; and disbursements of $31,568.24, leaving a balance on hand of $138,327.65.

At a called meeting of the board on June 16th they will appoint a constable at Williams to take the place left vacant by the death of Victor Melick.

The county moves today a gang of road men to what is called the Verde cut-off, a strip of road connecting the Lake Mary road with the Verde road. George Hulse's gang is now moving from Dead Man's Flat to Cedar Wash Hill. It is hoped that the government work on the Oak Creek cut-off will start during next month.

Geo. See returns

FROM A. E. F. SERVICE

George See got home Sunday after a period in France, where he went along with several other young men from the United States to teach the Middle Europeans proper manners. He was gone about a year and brought back with him a new model of French pistol, a beauty, along with other interesting relics. George was a member of the stretcher bearers.

See's plans are not laid for the future. Before leaving Flagstaff he drove the fire truck for the city.

WHITSUNDAY SERVICE

Next Sunday, June 8, being Whitsunday, the regular morning service at 11 o'clock at the Church of the Epiphany will be especially devoted to the great theme of the day. Rev. Moore will preach on "The Motive Power of the Holy Spirit." A generous welcome is extended to all the citizens of Flagstaff and to all visitors in town to join us in this service.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to acknowledge with deep gratitude the many acts of kindness, and expressions of sympathy through flowers, on the part of friends during the illness and death of our mother.

MISS LENA LANEY.
